Reference: 1. cpp20040116000207 hong kong feng huang wei shih tzu hsun tai mandarin 1500 gmt 16 jan 04 Beijing, Jan. 17 (Xinhua) -- China urged the United States to abide by its promises and continue to oppose any activities of the Taiwan authority aimed at Taiwan independence, said Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Kong Quan here Saturday.

Kong made the remarks when asked to comment on Hong Kong-based Phoenix TV's exclusive interview with US Secretary of State Colin Powell on the two questions proposed by Chen Shui-bian for the March 20 Taiwan referendum.

Chen Shui-bian, in the guise of peace and democracy, goes his own way to practice so called referendum, disregarding the essential good of Taiwan people and international objection, Kong said.

This is a unilateral provocation of the peace and stability of the Taiwan Straits and impairs relations of the two sides across the straits, he said, stressing that the essence of the Taiwan authorities' attempt is to pave the way for a referendum on independence.

"We firmly opposes Chen's activity to sperate Taiwan from China," Kong stressed.

China has noticed US President George W. Bush's clear stance of adherence to the one-China policy, abiding by the three Sino-US joint communiques and opposing any word or activity of the Taiwan authority to change the status quo of Taiwan, and the US authority has reiterated this stance several times, he said.

...together to develop new technologies, such as full computer systems on one piece of silicon.

Two officials from the Canadian high-technology industry are visiting Taiwan this week to explore opportunities for research collaboration between the two nations in the area of chip design.

"Canada's partnership with Taiwan in chip design is growing," Keith Parsonage, director general of Industry Canada's information and communications technology (ICT) branch, told reporters in Taipei yesterday.

Parsonage and Krzysztof Iniewski, a consultant with Canadian Microelectronics Corp, are in Taiwan to discuss possible partnerships in creating full computer systems on one piece of silicon, or systems-on-a-chip (SoC).

"Our purpose in coming to Taiwan is to explore possible co-operation opportunities with uni-versities and companies here," Iniewski said.

On Monday, the delegation met with 30 representatives from Taiwan's semiconductor industry in the nation's critical chip manufacturing heartland of Hsinchu. "We are pleased with the high turnout, with key people from Taiwan's semiconductor companies attending," he said.

The nation is home to the world's two largest foundries, or manufacturers of made-to-order semiconductors. As manufacturing moves from Taiwan to cheaper countries in Asia, the nation is keen to develop its research and development capabilities.

"We want to upgrade Taiwan's semiconductor industry to become more design-oriented," Huang Wei, director of the System-on-a-Chip Research Center of Hsinchu's National Chiao Tung University, told the Taipei Times yesterday.
